The screenshot shows a web article on the IllustrationX website. At the top, there are navigation links for 'Reviews', 'Features', 'Join Club LWLies', and 'Get the Map'. The page title is 'Little White Lies'. Below the navigation, there are links for 'MEMBERSHIP: Support our independent journalists', 'PODCAST: Listen and Subscribe', and 'YOUTUBE: Watch our latest video essays'. The main content area features a large illustration of Luca Guadagnino sitting on a chair, holding a camera and a laptop. The illustration is in a vibrant, stylized color palette. Below the illustration, the article title reads 'Luca Guadagnino: 'I don't watch tennis matches. It's quite boring to me''. The author is identified as 'WORDS & INTERVIEW BY DAVID JENKINS' and 'ILLUSTRATIONS BY ANDREI NICOLESCU'. The article text begins with 'We catch up with the Italian provocateur behind Challengers: the sports drama starring Zendaya, Josh O'Connor and Mike Faist, that's getting pulses raising around the world this spring.' and continues with a paragraph starting 'It's 6:55am Pacific Standard Time, and Luca Guadagnino is sat in the passenger seat of a packed car, shades balanced on dome, and looking down into his smartphone to begin our chat. The last time I spoke to the director was on the occasion of Call Me by Your Name's swift ascent to the deserving status of global sensation, and in the spirit of the film we conversed while Guadagnino did his morning walk around his one-time hometown of Crema, pausing occasionally to greet passers by.' The article also includes a sub-headline 'The subject now is Challengers, a skillfully-wrought romantic melodrama of the old school that's set in the world of professional tennis, where the tense ebb and flow of a men's singles match between Josh O'Connor's Patrick and Mike Faist's Art is compounded further by the slow release of details about both of their relationships with Zendaya's injured almost-star, Tabi. It's a film of visual razzmatazz and cheeky humour that's'. To the right of the article, there is a sidebar with the 'ILLUSTRATIONX' logo and 'Most Popular' section, featuring a list of articles with small thumbnail images: 'LWLies 102: the Challengers issue - Out now!', 'What to watch at home in April', 'Three's Company: Zendaya, Josh O'Connor and Mike Faist on Challengers', and 'Building community through creativity, Queer East Film Festival comes of age'.
