Wound doctor is the earlier term, used from the Middle Ages (at the beginning of the 13th century) until the second half of the 19th century, for various healers working as surgeons. Wound physicians were also found in the military, where they were called Feldscher, and there were wound physicians who ran their own practices in larger settlements or roamed the countryside as itinerant physicians. Wound physicians were also employed at court for the personal care of better-off personalities. Wound doctors were important points of contact for the population in the case of all kinds of illnesses.
