Anne's diary kept her company and she wrote in it for hours. She wanted to publish a book one day and become a famous writer.

How do you push the boundaries of bourbon without tainting the tradition?
By taking the science of distillation, the art of maturation, and adding some good old-fashioned experimenting.
That's how we add complexity – through different selection, agitation, and environmental processes.
The result? A provocative taste unlike any other bourbons out there.

Anne's father, Otto, was the only one of the family who survived that terrible war. He found her diary and cried and cried as he read what his little daughter had written.

While ambassador to France, Thomas Jefferson fell in love with a Bordeaux from Chateau Pichon Baron. Once back stateside, he kept the wine stocked wherever he resided – from the White House to Monticello. So we thought, why not finish a batch of great bourbon in the barrels that once housed this Bordeaux? Sacré bleu! We're glad we did. And you will be too, once it romances your palate.
